Fryeburg.
DECADENCE OF THE CHANDLER FAMILY.

Half a century ago no family known better than this one would be found within the limits of this ancient town. The descendants of Dr. Moses Chandler lived at and near the Center. He was a Revolutionary soldier under Stark at Bennington, and his name is inscribed among the patriots on that lofty monument erected there a few years ago in honor of that great civil victory. At the close of the war he read medicine and settled in Fryeburg, where for many years he was a pioneer physician, traveling a large circuit in every direction. His home was frequently visited by Daniel Webster, when teacher of the academy. The doctor's life was the grand daughter of Samuel Langdon, President of Harvard College. They had quite a family of children, including Samuel and Moses and Joseph, twins, Isaac, who became a well-known physician, Paul, Ann and Betsey. They all settled in Maine, and nearly all had children, that fifty years ago were in early life, of whom several survive, but have scattered, and become notable in various states. Of these might be mentioned James Everett, a son of Samuel L., a lawyer and widely known astronomical lecturer residing in Boston suburbs; Lizzie E., daughter of Joseph, a well-known writer, poetess, and composer of great merit, the wife of Dr. Charles of Fryeburg, Maine, also a native of Fryeburg, and eminent in his profession. The writer is prompted to write a word to the good old home of the 9th day of December, 1907, it being the 54th birthday of Mary, the good mother of Lizzie, now residing with the daughter. She (Mary) was the youngest of the oldest patriarch of this ancient family, and it is safe to say her many old friends will be glad to know that she is yet in good health, in both mind and body. She is the widow of the honored Joseph. Her well-known mental vigor is retained to a remarkable degree, and her nephew looks forward with pleasure to an early visit from her. Long live yet this oldest surviving Chandler. All the other ones save one other, (widow of Moses), are gone.

How about the aqueducts, should it continue like this a month longer only more so and but very little snow on the ground? The temperature did not get quite down to the cypher this morning at this place, but probably reached that point and possibly lower in more frosty localities. The butchering season still continues. Yesterday we went to Locke's Mills, taking all the implements of war with them, heated the water, killed and dressed off a 200 pound pig entirely alone and returned before noon, the distance being four miles. The day before we called on Bryant's Pond and assisted in killing and dressing off seven porkers, weighing from 200 to 300 pounds, besides four calves, and returned after them, saying they were doing the work for the neighbors. During the summer of 1902 the Siamese Twins exhibited at Wintrop village, and were said to be one of the greatest freaks that nature ever produced. One paper in commenting on them said it was difficult to decide whether they were really two men or one man with two bodies, as stillars were they in some ways as well as every act and thought. Such freaks have occurred in the animal and vegetable worlds ever since their creation, for aught we know to the contrary, and probably will to the end of the chapter. This time it was two pumpkins joined together, neither their whole length, and one quarter of their surface, or one pumpkin in two sections. There was only one stem, but of twice the usual width. The two opposite ends were well defined, what was once their calyxes being nearly five inches apart. Say, was it one pumpkin or two?
